PREFACE

This Seventh International Edition of WHO'S WHO IN COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY (founded in 1936 and sub-titled "The International Business Who's Who") is noteworthy because of containing the first application of Marquis-developed "Locator-Indexing" to business reference use. This initial application is made to the new "Indexed Catalog of Selected Principal Businesses"—page 1335—and provides for the first time ready concern-to-executive reference.

"The Catalog of Selected Principal Businesses" offers an alphabetical, selected listing of principal businesses, each listing being followed by key numbers, each of which consists of three numbers. These three-number keys direct the user—by page, column and line—to career sketches—in the main biographical section of WHO'S WHO IN COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY—of ranking executives of a firm he has noted.

This unique indexing system makes possible quickly answering numerous questions asked among business men, day in and day out, regarding the ranking executives of the principal concerns in this country. For example: Who is their president? What's their vice-president's name? Have they a treasurer named Smyth? And, at the same time, it provides the answers to the usual questions about the individual executive which almost invariably come up once his name is known: How long has he been there? Did he formerly work for Blank & Blank? What's his home address? Always in that line? About fifty? Any sales experience? A technical man? Ever in government service? Married? Children?

The new Edition is also the first "Commerce and Industry" to be drawn entirely from the Marquis National Biographee Reference File, for in fact it is a compilation of the Marquis-listed biographees currently of record in the commercial and industrial section of this File, with the additions of executives of representative and outstanding foreign businesses. This development is in line with the current Marquis practice of publishing in each Marquis biographical dictionary the appropriate segment of the File, this Seventh Edition of "Commerce and Industry" being the first "functional" application of this method.

The Marquis National Biographee Reference File, which has been in compilation for several years, is probably the most comprehensive listing of Americans, falling under carefully established selective standards for reflecting subjectivity to reference enquiry because of meritorious factors, to be attempted and maintained under constant revision. Each man or woman so recorded as a Marquis-listed biographee, has been considered by the Editors to come under the appropriate selective standards, and invited by them to supply firsthand biographical-career data for the File, and to assure these data revisionary scrutiny periodically. It follows that selection as a Marquis biographee is established by so cooperating with the Editors—after selection by them and invitation from them—in enlarging the available store of revised-to-date American biographical data, and not by the variable incidence of publication of individual data. As some tangible reciprocation for this essential cooperation in supplying and checking data, which is not only vital to File currency, but which can only be effectively obtained directly from them, Marquis biographees are extended substantial subscription preferences in respect to all Marquis biographical dictionaries.

Expert opinion and staff investigation confirm our Editors' experience that many not falling under the arbitrarily precise type of general reference enquiry served by "Who's Who," are indisputably subject to specific types of intersectional and national—even international—reference enquiry because of their professional, vocational, commercial or industrial standing in functional or "line-of-endeavor" callings. The Marquis functional and regional biographical dictionaries are published to serve these reference uses for which "Who's Who" alone can not provide.

Since obviously the outstanding important biographical service the Marquis functional dictionaries can render is to increase the store of recorded American biography available to historians, writers, biographers, and others consulting them for specific purposes, all Marquis biographees—as specified above, those selected under Marquis standards for entry in the National Biographee Reference File who have supplied data to it which they revise down-to-date at the Editors' request—are listed, or their File data published, in part or in whole (assembled as biographies-in-brief), in every printing of a Marquis functional dictionary within the activity scope of which they fall, until time-lapses make en bloc referrals to preceding editions logical.

This unique method results in a greater, and more effectively selected, increase in the country's biographical store of data permanently-ofrecord, and distributed-for-reference-use, steadily, if gradually, accumulating, than would otherwise be feasible under the practicalities of cost and space. It also provides an "index" to far more biographees' data than has heretofore been practicable.

Each functional compilation accordingly, and as arbitrarily decided by its compilers (1) lists, or (2) sketches in condensed-to-essentials biographies in the format originated by Marquis, the Marquis biographees currently entered in the appropriate functional classification, of the National Biographee File. Thus all "'Who's Who" biographees—who are of course the listings essential to the content of each of these compilations being either what its title plainly represents it to be, or being adequate for reasonable service as each biographical reference dictionary in its owners' libraries or on their desks—and all the other Marquis biographees currently within the scope of each—are either listed or sketched. Arranging a group of biographies alphabetically obviously does not result in a compilation that can be truthfully represented, by way of title, title page or preface, as a dictionary of the outstanding within the scope of that title, title page, or preface, unless (1) at least those so markedly outstanding within that scope as to be generally considered subject to enquiry even beyond it, are included, or (2) conversely in the cases of titles, title pages, or prefaces asserting scopes restricted to world renown or similarly extremely exceptional attainments, those clearly and indisputably not of such achievement or position, are rigidly excluded. As a matter of fact, otherwise the result can only be simply an alphabetical arrangement of biographies of some men and women engaged in a common calling or profession (a directory, even, is not secured, for only "some" are involved). Certainly a number of these biographies will never have been published before—anywhere, at any time—and if title, title page and preface do not directly or by inference misrepresent that other than such a result is involved, no misrepresentation occurs, and those interested in acquiring biographies as biographies only, either of themselves, or all that get into print, become logical purchasers.

It should perhaps be specifically noted that all selected under the Marquis standards as appropriate for listing (on their making data available and checking them for currency) are of course not included in these Marquis dictionaries—as the percentage failing to provide data and revisions is predominate at certain functional levels, those involved in that large percentage naturally can not be given entry in the National File as Marquis biographees. And all the biographees who are currently entered in the functional classification of the National File from which an issuance of a functional dictionary has been compiled, are not, as emphasized, sketched in that printing, but only those selected by compilers arbitrarily applying space, cost and other factors, and in addition, whenever in their opinion it is necessary to do so, their judgment —admittedly fallible—of comparative exposure to reference enquiry.

The data published in this compilation include those of approximately 4,700 Marquis-listed biographees of whom biographies-in-brief have not heretofore been added to the store of biography made permanently available through publication and circulation in Marquis biographical dictionaries. Their cooperation and participation in making that considerable addition possible merits the appreciation of all who are as a result, either presently or in the run of time, assisted—in the course of writing, research, or individual biographical interest—as directly as the Editors', which is here made of record by them. And corresponding appreciation is due those who have made available data listed as of record in published form in other Marquis dictionaries, or as presently to hand unpublished in the Marquis National Biographee Reference File, for they have likewise cooperated in increasing the national store of biography reflecting the careers of the comparatively small percentage of Americans who come under carefully tested selective standards based on over half a century of specialized biographical compilative experience. This dictionary alone lists biographical records of over 27,800 identified with the commerce and industry, in addition to the 4,700 now first-published in it—each a Marquis biographee selected under such standards. In compiling this Edition of WHO'S WHO IN COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY, the Editors have had the assistance of the officials of numerous business organizations and associations, governmental agencies; and of the representatives of foreign countries and trade interests stationed in the United States. To them the Editors here extend thanks and appreciation, and also to those among the 32,500 listed as Marquis biographees in the commercial and industrial section of the Marquis National Biographee Reference File, who not only cooperated with the usual scrutiny and revising of manuscripts and proofs, but as well in the last minute checking of index forms required by the special compilative process for "The Catalog of Selected Principal Businesses."

ALPHABETIZATION PRACTICES 12

AN IMPORTANT NOTICE

This work, like all the standard Marquis biographical reference publications, is not merely an alphabetical arrangement of biographical data. And it is not a mere compilation of the names of those responding to mailings to lists obtainable from the mailing list concerns and other sources. When there is no rigorous enforcement of a selective standard which assures inclusion of the listings necessary to coverage of basic reference requirements, no reference standing, completeness or worth can result.

Its compilation has been so patterned that this work will serve usefully and effectively in private or public libraries as a sound biographical reference tool. Biographees h a v e been painstakingly searched out who fall under the unique measures of reference incidence carefully assembled at large expense by The A. N. Marquis Company to meet its standards for selection resulting from a half century of specialized biographical reference experience.

Exploitation in any manner whatsoever of the names herein, thus selected and under which the biographical sketches appear alphabetically, is beyond the fair uses intended in the sale of the work, and in certain obvious circumstances, if damage follows to the publisher from a misappropriation of his time and expense expended in their selection, may bring legal action.

In respect to those selected for inclusion in the work, the great majority of whom have by making biographical data available cooperated in assuring the completeness vital to actual reference use, this notice is directed toward fending off on their behalf use of their names as canvassing and mailing lists; in respect to others, its purpose is obvious.

ADMISSION STANDARDS FOR THIS COMPILATION

Except for names which are included in this compilation for one or more of the arbitrary reasons designated below, the aim is to include the names, not necessarily of the best, but rather of the best-known, men and women the world over in all lines of useful and reputable commercial and industrial endeavor — names much in the public eye generally throughout the business world. The standards of admission divide the eligible into two classes: (1) those selected on account of special prominence in their particular branch of business, making them the subjects of extensive interest, inquiry or discussion in the business world; and (2) those included arbitrarily on account of positions held in commercial and industrial concerns of certain sizes or "rating" standings.

The first of these two classes comprises persons who have accomplished some conspicuous achievement — something out of the ordinary, so to speak—something which distinguishes them from the vast majority of their business contemporaries. This class is confined to those so identified with affairs of commerce and industry as to be subject to wide inquiry or discussion. Names frequently appear of those who are broadly prominent in some special field, but who are little known in their own countries. The man whose commercial relations may spread far may be scarcely known in the particular locality in which he lives. He is often a person whose business specialization is better known than himself, and it is pertinent information concerning such an individual that the compilers aim to gather and disseminate.

The arbitrary class embraces, without regard to notability or prominence in any other respect, the following: principals of commercial and industrial concerns capitalized at or above a certain figure; principals of business organizations of the type not readily judged on capitalization alone, but of high commercial "rating"; principals of leading firms engaged in international commerce or finance; principals of non-American businesses assumed to be of particular interest to American businessmen; and principals of a select list of highly specialized American concerns considered to be exposed to widespread interest because of the types of their work, or the natures of their products, regardless of their sizes in terms of capital or plant.

ALPHABETIZATION PRACTICES

Names are arranged alphabetically according to the surnames, and under identical surnames according to the first given name. If both surname and first given name are identical, names are arranged alphabetically according to the second given name. Where full names are identical, they are arranged in order of age—those of the elder being put first.

Surnames beginning with De, Des, Du, etc., however capitalized or spaced, are recorded with the prefix preceding the surname and arranged alphabetically under the letter D.

Surnames beginning with Mac are arranged alphabetically under M. This likewise holds for names beginning with Mc; that is, all names beginning Mc will be found in alphabetical order after those beginning Mac.

Surnames beginning with St. (Saint) are all arranged before names beginning Sta and are themselves arranged according to the second part of the surname (St. Clair before St. Dennis). Names prefixed with Saint (spelled out) are arranged in regular alphabetical order.

Surnames beginning with prefix Van are arranged alphabetically under letter V.

Surnames containing the prefix Von or von are usually arranged alphabetically under letter V; any exceptions are noted by cross references (Von Kleinsmid, Rufus Bernhard; see Kleinsmid, Rufus Bernhard von).

The five specific practices last above mentioned, which differ from the procedures followed by many reference centers and publishing organizations, have been adapted in the belief that every day use of a biographical compilation is as a result facilitated.

Compound hyphenated surnames are arranged according to the first member of the compound.

Compound unhyphenated surnames common in Spanish are not separated and are treated as hyphenated names.

Since Chinese names have the family name first, they are so arranged, but without comma between family name and given name (as Lin Yutang).

Parentheses used in connection with a name indicate which part of the full name is usually deleted in common usage. Hence Abbott, W(illiam) Lewis indicates that the usual form of the given names is W. Lewis. In alphabetizing this type the parentheses are not considered. However if the name is recorded Abbott, (William) Lewis, signifying that the entire name William is not commonly used, the alphabetizing would be arranged as though the name were Abbott, Lewis.
